FAIRFIELD

By all odds the most interesting portion of the exercises connected with the recent meeting of the State Audubon society was the delightful talk on birds given by Game Warden Wilbur F. Smith, of Norwalk. After the business of the meeting had been finished and a good luncheon served, Mr. Smith brought out his lantern slides and threw a series of beautiful bird pictures upon the screen. The pictures were made by himself from photographs taken in various towns in this State and in Vermont. Interspersed with the birds were pictures of rare spring flowers and enchanting landscapes, with now and then those of animal life. All interesting slides exhibited the most of an hour, and the time, containing 14 eggs, which was made in an open field of grass, on the top of the ground, without the slightest protection, not far from the house. When the mowing machine came along it cut off a wing of the mother bird, which had to be killed and the nest was destroyed. Another series of slides gave the life story of a doe which had been captured in Vermont, when very young and brought up by hand. It became a faithful friend of the run of the farm house, where it had been reared. Mr. Smith selects some one bird and gives its little life in a series of slides. At the time it begins to build its nest until the young are able to desert their home and fly out into the great world. A series of pictures related to the cow bird, which is hatched in a nest with other eggs, and which, as it grows up, crowds the rightful occupants out, always seeking for the most favorable situation for its own young. The character given the cow bird was a very interesting one. It needed no reminder, on the part of Mr. Smith, to point the human moral, or cite instances among men who resemble the cow bird. Mr. Smith experimented with stuffed owls and hawks, placed in trees, to note what effect their presences would have upon our common song birds. The owls would be viciously attacked by all kinds of birds, even the sparrow getting in a dig, but the hawk caused dread and other. After the talk, which has a poor opinion of crows, and thinks the more of them killed, the better.

STRATFORD

The banquet given last night, at Red Men's hall, as the closing function in connection with the 50th anniversary of the dedication of the Congregational church, was the largest and most notable ever held in the history of the town. Over 300 covers were laid and a bountiful menu was served. A table for the honored guests was spread on the platform, or stage of the hall, over which Judge Howard J. A. Curtis presided as toastmaster. Seated around him were the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Packard, Rev. Joel S. Ives, Rev. and Mrs. George Farrar, Rev. and Mrs. Cornwall, Rev. Cyrus S. Stimson, Rev. and Mrs. George Judson, Miss Sterling, Mrs. Myra Wells, Rev. Mr. DePue of Bridgeport, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Curtis of Brookfield, and others. After the tables had been cleared Judge Curtis rapped for order and said in substance: Never so many charming ladies and chivalrous gentlemen were seated at a banquet before in Stratford. If this celebration was simply to mark the fact of the elapse of 50 years since the church was built, the occasion would be trivial. It is not that, it is nothing for a church to stand 50 years. Only flood, or fire or earthquake could overthrow it, but if a man lives to be over 50 he has had to fight many things as well as millions of microbes. We celebrate the continuity of a long succession of churches. Think of Stratford without its churches! Think of coming to this town and not finding the beautiful twin spires. This celebration marks the close of the period in this church when man was supreme. Now the women have control. It is the old story of the weakness of women and the weakness of men. There was a time when 70 women presented a petition to the church authorities for the right to vote in church matters. No rebuff would quench the designing women and now they have supplanted man. You remember the story of the tent and the camel. The Arab wished to put his head inside the tent because of the storm outside. The Arab consented. Soon the Arab was out on the sand and the camel was inside the tent. The men of the church are today struggling in the sand and the women are in power. I can see the celebration which will be held in the year 1959. All seats will be occupied with women and the men will be out in the horseheads getting their flying machines ready to take to the air. Our most cherished possession is the gentleman in our pulpit who gives us the ripened experience of a long and useful life. As he said, we are over 50 and walks in our streets his presence is a benediction. We love all the churches in this town although we are sometimes forgetful there are any others. The Judge paid a high tribute to the Episcopal church, saying that the Congregationalists have always had a mouth. Some of the Episcopalians are descended from Puritan stock. He brought his greetings and congratulations. May the churches of this community call the some of the enthusiasm manifested in the two papers read on Sunday by Mrs. Bunnell and Mrs. Cogswell. The present church can be altered into a cathedral, if one should be needed. Fifty years ago was an era of building new churches in this vicinity. We will adopt anything but the old. The Congregationalism is a composite Christian. The Congregational church is an evolution from the church of England.

In calling upon Rev. George Farrar to respond for the Methodist church, Judge Curtis told about Peter Farrar in Ridgefield. A man stood on a wood pile preaching the new gospel. Soon prayer meetings, class meetings, experience meetings, etc., were held at various houses. Some of the people did not like the innovation and tried to stop it. Farrar Goodrich is in low and watched the Methodists. He liked what they were doing and started meetings of his own, which he called conferences. Thus our church was called a conference man, a name it still bears. While the Methodists have had an influence over our church, which was perhaps a little too conservative, we have modified somewhat, and now they have got up to our point of conservatism.

Rev. Mr. Farrar said it was his joy and privilege to bring the greetings of the Methodist church. He paid a high tribute to the Puritans and said the voyage of the Mayflower, in the history of the world, was second in importance only to that made by Columbus when he discovered America. The Congregational church is a monument to civil and religious freedom and when the Methodists came they found a soil the reaping of which has astonished the world. You have been to us as an elder brother. We have lived in Stratford 60 years. We want you in your magnificent work: "Bless be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

In introducing Rev. John DePue of Bridgeport, Judge Curtis said: We like his fine analytical mind, he is a fine all around fellow all the while. Mr. DePue said "Your Caesius hath a lean how hungry look. He complimented the size of the gathering, and intimated that the next time he came to Stratford to preach, it might be well to have a coin old before the sermon. He said Judge Curtis was always a superior judge when he was in the court of Common Pleas. Some things we want to get away from and never can. Here we are again plunged into the Cook controversy with no rest for Peary. He is delighted with old Stratford. There is a spirit here which is distinctive. It is one of those blessings that you are descended from old Puritan stock. This is a different town from Fairfield. All the good things go to Stratford. It is always a joy to be here. I bring you the greeting of your daughter church.

Dr. Joel S. Ives was the next speaker introduced. Judge Curtis said he knows us better than any man in the world—how far we can be pushed and how long we can be coaxed. He has a cheerful face and a delightful good nature. Dr. Ives in reply said: he took great delight in meeting all these faces and bringing felicitations and good cheer. In old times all were taxed for the support of the Congregational church, even if they did go to the Episcopal. But after a while he was allowed to pay for the support of any other church he wished to attend. All he had to do was to sign a document which read: "I, A. E. have renounced the Christian religion and joined the Episcopal church!" He gave many interesting reminiscences of his life and work in town and spoke especially of Mr. Judson Curtis in calling upon Rev. Cyrus F. Stimson to speak Judge Curtis remarked that he can see long distances, from a high tower in the town of Maine, a state which is buttressed all around by prohibition states, and he lives in a city called Waterville. It is said he declined to accept a charge in the neighboring city of Rumford, on account of its name. Judge Curtis gave Mr. Stimson the credit of having instituted the Women's Aid Society, and said that now he is engaged in the task of reform municipal government the one thing which is needed more than any other in our land in which we have been such conspicuous failures. Thus he works off his surplus energy. Mr. Stimson spoke with feeling of his warm reception and said the wine of life is pure friendship. He was glad to enjoy it. Before coming to Stratford he had been told it was a cold and dry place. He said he hadn't been in the town long before everybody realized it was a warm place all through. Many of my reminiscences are rather delicate. I have been looking since my return for a big strapping boy who taught me how to be a teacher by calling out "Hello Cy!" This is a very dear spot for me. I look for improvements, for marks of change. There is Judge Curtis—I often felt he was growing in piety. He once attended a convention or meeting of clergymen and was asked to lead in prayer. He requested the men to bow their heads in silent prayer for a while, and when they all did so he quietly got up and left them! Mr. Stimson said he had expected to see at least the wife of the parish house rising. He hoped it would soon be built, and that if there was not money enough, the church would borrow the money. The speech making was closed by an address from Rev. Geo. Judson of Winsted, who it was remarked used to be the despair of his parish school teachers but became a different man under the kindly influence and teaching of Rev. Frank S. Fitch. He told the audience of the conversion and good work for the last ten years of his brother, also a member of the Stratford church, who died a few weeks ago in Savannah, Georgia.
